The inspectorate team moves into the identified area and collects the first wave of unsterilised dogs and cats.

Upon arrival at the JSPCA hospital, these animals are processed, treated for endo and ecto-parasites and checked for possible Biliary.

Then, slightly bewildered but flea and tick free, they are placed in the hospital kennels with a bowl of premium pet food.

Tuesday 26 February, 09h00

Preparation for surgery begins. A team of veterinarians, nurses, animal welfare assistants and orderlies start implementing procedures that will result in the first group being spayed and neutered animals. It will be a long, but rewarding day.
